Laboratory made crown

Local anaesthetic

If you have been diagnosed with caries or a medium to large fracture of the tooth crown, action is required to prevent the situation from worsening.

In cases such as these, Dr. Víctor J. Hernández Darías recommends a laboratory-made crown made of plastic, zirconium oxide or other ceramic materials. The material that is used depends on the location, the required durability, and on your personal habits and chewing behaviour.

The success rate for this procedure varies from person to person and will be discussed in detail, but it is very high if you collaborate closely with us. Reduced mouth opening and excessive saliva flow can negatively impact durability and treatment success.

The treatment takes place in two to three sessions and takes between 30 minutes and one hour/tooth. If caries is present, it must first be completely removed. Dr. Víctor Hernández Darías then prepares the tooth to receive the materials. Dental impressions are taken using various silicones and alginates. You will then work with the dentist to select the best colour and a temporary will be produced. About a week later you will be seen for a fitting, and the final appointment is to complete the work.

Treatment alternatives are dental fillings, which we advised you against because of the size of the defect or which you did not want. On average, these last longer. Another alternative would be tooth extraction followed by an implant or removable dentures.

Consent to the dental procedure

I have been informed that the above-mentioned measure is to be carried out on me.

I was adequately informed about the nature, purpose and course of the intervention, as well as about its main advantages and disadvantages and risks, also in comparison to other methods of examination, treatment, surgery and refraining from the intervention.

I am aware that under certain circumstances the intervention may have to be supplemented and an extension or modification of the planned measures may only prove necessary at a later date. I have been made aware of possible physical, psychological and professional complications in the period following the procedure. I was also made aware of the following possible complications:

- Allergic reactions
- Numbness
- Aspiration of objects
- Injury to the soft tissues
- Failure, further need for treatment
- Damage to the tooth nerve
- Sensitivities after treatment
- Incorrect shade matching/bite matching
